Kolkata Special. In India Vs Pakistan the politics is all over the news. In the interview I'm going to talk about that now and then in my speeches. It's an exciting time. What if the two armies would stay as one and the people of Pakistan would become like Kashmiri. So what is India's destiny? Is it a country or is it just a place? My answer to both questions is the same. India has the choice. It's up to its people. What's right for India is India's destiny. India has chosen India for the last 100 years to achieve a nation like Kashmir, India has chosen the right place for it. India and Pakistan have worked together for that. If we are to achieve the best of India, India has to achieve the best of Pakistan. There are things that cannot be seen but we can see by that. The two countries are bound together like dogs in the street. They are living through this in two separate ways and they are not free to move about like an ordinary country. There is a lot of work to be done to turn both countries into a country and not a dog in the street. What India has is an international relationship and it is the responsibility of its Prime Minister to make that a reality. As I explained then, there are two pillars to this country, the first pillar is that of our common motherland and this is what I have worked to put our people to. That was my first task. There are two other things too. India itself needs to build a global economy, there are many sectors in the entire country that do needs to be done the right way, from education to healthcare, from social engineering to urban development. There are many sectors outside of India where the need is greatest. That's what, we have to build an infrastructure based economy that can support the entire society. My second task was in the area of India's future. I have been doing this for almost four decades and at the beginning, when the country was young, there was a large debate on who should lead the country for the next 50 years. The government and the Congress and the UPA government have talked about it but I have been told that there is no consensus on that.
